Anaiah Quinn
Gabriel Trevino
Armando Cabrera
Angel Bautista
Miguel Renteria

Sprint 3: Evidence Log and Competitive Landscape

1. Evidence Log

Source	Tier	Tag	Observed behavior	Current alternative / status quo	Push / pull evidence	Money / time	Implication
Interview 1	Tier 1 - Interview	Behavior + Opinion	Helped coordinate transportation from El Paso to California for a sister's wedding; personally transported about five people. Uses Expedia for flights/trips.	Expedia; informal group coordination; people pitching in for shared costs.	Started using Expedia because it is cost-efficient and supports comparing options/payment flexibility. Cost was the strongest frustration.	$200 typical event/party-related spend mentioned; shared costs are often handled informally.	Supports cost/budget coordination as a real problem. Participant proposed group size, location, and per-person money as useful planning inputs, but that proposal is opinion, not behavior.
Interview 2	Tier 1 - Interview	Behavior + Opinion	Helped with a nephew's birthday party about one month earlier, especially decorations. Family searched store-to-store and relied on known local rental contacts for tables/chairs. Used Canva for invitations.	Canva; physical store search; personal contacts/local rental business; in-person coordination.	Current process works through familiarity and contacts, but requires manual searching. Participant did not know the rental business's reservation process.	No reliable money/time amount captured.	Strong evidence of fragmented/manual vendor discovery. Positive reaction to a centralized app is opinion and should not be used alone to move business-case numbers.
Interview 3	Tier 1 - Interview	Behavior + Opinion	Attended a Halloween party the prior week; saved the invitation/date and forwarded the invitation to friends. Would use Canva if creating an invitation.	Invitation forwarding; personal scheduling; Canva for invitation design; manual guest outreach.	Main frustration described was uncertainty about attendance because unexpected turnout affects food/drinks; also described preparation and inviting everyone as stressful.	Initially said about $100, then revised event spend to as much as about $300 including decorations.	Supports RSVP/head-count tracking and centralized invitation updates as meaningful problems. Agreement that an app would help is opinion, not behavioral proof.
Partiful Teardown	Tier 1 - Teardown	Behavior + Opinion	Downloaded and registered through Google Play; created and configured a graduation event, shared an invitation link, submitted a test RSVP, and verified the response appeared on the host side. Deleted the event successfully. Also explored guest controls, ticketing, and	Partiful, a direct competitor offering event creation, invitations, RSVP management, and additional planning features.	Pull: Straightforward event creation, integrated RSVP tracking, guest controls, and cost-sharing options. Push: N/A; no significant frustrations encountered during testing.	Free-tier functionality tested; visual theme customization required an upgrade. No exact price or task duration recorded.	Partiful already provides many of Festivo's planned features. Festivo may need to differentiate through vendor discovery and broader planning functionality rather than event creation and RSVP management alone.

Source	Tier	Tag	Observed behavior	Current alternative / status quo	Push / pull evidence	Money / time	Implication
			cost-sharing options.
Canva Teardown	Tier 1 - Teardown	Behavior + Opinion	Created an account, selected an invitation template, customized text and visual elements, uploaded and edited an image, and downloaded the completed invitation as a PNG. Did not find integrated invitation distribution or RSVP tracking in the tested workflow.	Canva, an indirect competitor used for invitation design; separate communication methods needed to distribute the downloaded invitation.	Pull: Accessible templates and flexible invitation customization. Push: The tested workflow required separate distribution and did not provide integrated RSVP tracking.	Basic invitation creation was free; some additional features required a subscription, with benefits available to eligible students. No exact price or task duration recorded	Canva provides an established invitation-design alternative, but Festivo could offer additional value through integrated invitation distribution and RSVP management.