Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Trip Optimization

- How often do you travel? About once a year.
- What are some of the expenses that you have to take in mind during these travels?
Snacks, gas, toiletries, stuff to freshen up. Food.

- Do you currently use any App or website that helps you plan the most affordable trip? I once used that one site for hotels, expedia. Sometimes greyhound to catch a bus.
- Do you travel as much as you wish you did? What is stopping you if not? Hell nah, I do not travel as much as I wish I was going more often. Money. Bills.
- If money was not as much of a limiting factor, would you travel more often? If money was not an issue at least 2 or three times a year, a little more than I do now. It is a hassle.
- Are you more likely to travel if the process of booking everything, at the cheapest value was a quicker process? No because sometimes you get what you pay for, sometimes you get something cheap but its a nasty part of town.
- Would you use an app that gives you the most affordable flights, hotel, nearby restaurants, event tickets? Hell yeah cause I hate having to have separate apps. If it was all in one place. But what about support if something goes wrong.

Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Trip Optimization

- How often do you travel? Three times a year.
- What are some of the expenses that you have to take in mind during these travels? Food, gas, spending money, regular every day expenses, entertainment, etc. Shopping, gambling, depends on where I'm going.
- Do you currently use any App or website that helps you plan the most affordable trip? No
- Do you travel as much as you wish you did? What is stopping you if not? I want to travel more. Work is stopping me.
- If money was not as much of a limiting factor, would you travel more often? About the same.
- Are you more likely to travel if the process of booking everything, at the cheapest value was a quicker process? I want to say yes, but realistically I do not have enough time because of work.
- Would you use an app that gives you the most affordable flights, hotel, nearby restaurants, event tickets? It depends on what deals the website or apps have. I am open to either.

Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Trip Optimization

- How often do you travel? Haven't for about 6 years, but before that a lot of traveling to take the kids to visit grandparents.
- What are some of the expenses that you have to take in mind during these travels? Gas and food. Cause we stayed in someones house, no hotels or anything
- Do you currently use any App or website that helps you plan the most affordable trip? Only thing was looking at the weather.

- Do you travel as much as you wish you did? What is stopping you if not? I would love to travel more but I don't because I'm too cheap.
- If money was not as much of a limiting factor, would you travel more often? I would definately if I didn't have to worry so much of the cost of it. I would go to the painted desert.
- Are you more likely to travel if the process of booking everything, at the cheapest value, was a quicker process? I definately would.
- Would you use an app that gives you the most affordable flights, hotels, nearby restaurants, or event tickets? If you could do the whole itinerary in one spot it would definitely be convenient. Price shopping would be nice to find the cheapest prices. Or for it to show you the top 3 number one choices.

Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Trip Optimization

- How often do you travel? 6 times a month.
- What are some of the expenses that you have to take in mind during these travels? Food, activities there, transportation, clothing and shopping.
- Do you currently use any App or website that helps you plan the most affordable trip? I use google maps, also depends if I want to go somewhere out of where I live, I wouldn't book a hotel, but I would book an bnb.
- Do you travel as much as you wish you did? What is stopping you if not? I would love to travel more, if I had the means I would be out and about
- If money was not as much of a limiting factor, would you travel more often? If I had the money I would be out of here.
- Are you more likely to travel if the process of booking everything, at the cheapest value was a quicker process? I very much would.
- Would you use an app that gives you the most affordable flights, hotel, nearby restaurants, event tickets? If I had an app that told me it was within my budget I would definately use it to travel.

Interviewer(s)	Anaiah Quinn
Date	9/4/26	Time	5:13 PM
Location	In Person
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Better Parking

1. Explain your typical experience finding parking

“I prefer free parking, not paying for parking. Downtown, you shouldn't have to pay to park just to get service. Parking spots should be big enough to fit the whole vehicle to avoid getting hit or clipped when stationary”

2. In what scenarios do you find parking to be the most troublesome?

“Downtown parking is most troublesome, you have to pay for inconvenient parking, the facilities aren't adequate. It makes me avoid downtown”

3. How close to your desired destination do you tend to find parking?

“I would prefer as close as possible but because El Paso is crowded, I find myself driving around a lot to find a decent spot. Walking distance , I will walk to avoid driving around and wasting gas. Searching for parking, getting into fights over parking isn't worth it.”

4. What makes a good parking spot?

“Short Walking distance”

5. What destinations tend to be harder to find parking for?

“Where designated parking is to far from actually destination”

6. What would make finding parking easier for you?

“I don't know. If there was gps app that had the location your going to, it shows you the nearest parking spot”

7. How does pay to park affect your parking experience?

“I'm trying to find the cheapest pay to park. I'm not paying 20$ for a parking spot, just for me to be there for like 10 - 15 mins. For example, I went to the courthouse and had to download a new app to pay for parking. What if I didn't have the self phone, or that technical knowledge? Older people, they have flip phones, our don't have text or app capabilities on their phones.”

Interviewer(s)	Anaiah Quinn
Date	9/5/26	Time	2:41 PM
Location	In Person
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Better Parking

1. Explain your typical experience finding parking

“In downtown El Paso, for parking you have to walk a good 10 min. Or I have to pay to park and worry about parking badly because the fines are so high. Its like 90 bucks if you park wrong”

2. In what scenarios do you find parking to be the most troublesome?

“When I’m trying to go to UTEP. Parking sucks, so many people regardless of the time. Even with the parking permits”

3. How close to your desired destination do you tend to find parking?

“At least a 5 min walk”

4. What makes a good parking spot?

“One that is close to the destinations but also away from the busyness of the streets. I prefer parking towers”

5. What destinations tend to be harder to find parking for?

“Schools, university campuses”

6. What would make finding parking easier for you?

“Designated parking spots or a way to know which spots are already taken”

7. How does pay to park affect your parking experience?

“I'm worried about not paying the right way or having issues with the payment sites. I don't want to spend more time trying to pay then it took me to get there.”

Interviewer(s)	Anaiah Quinn
Date	9/7/26	Time	10 AM
Location	In Person
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Better Parking

1. Explain your typical experience finding parking.

“Parking at UTEP means leaving the house at least 2 hours early because it can take up to 49 mins to find a parking spot and another 20 minutes to walk to the campus. Then to follow that with another 15 minutes of walking through the crowded campus to even find your classroom.”

2. In what scenarios do you find parking to be the most troublesome?

“It is always hard to find parking at UTEP and we are constantly competing with customers of other businesses to even find a spot”

3. How close to your desired destination do you tend to find parking?

“There is never parking close to where I desire to park”

4. What makes a good parking spot?

“A good parking spot or an ideal parking spot if it is not in a UTEP parking lot is somewhere that is within 15 minutes of walking distance from the school and is very well lit for when you get out of class late to avoid interacting with shady characters.”

5. What destinations tend to be harder to find parking for?

“It’s hard to find parking for ANYTHING at UTEP. Everything surrounding has a tow sign and it doesn’t make sense to enroll all these students and then give them nowhere to park.”

6. What would make finding parking easier for you?

“If there was more parking spots”

7. How does pay to park affect your parking experience?

“Pay to park sucks because it has reduced the number of spots significantly. If people couldn’t pay for a parking pass in the first place what makes you think they can pay the city or the residence for possible parking every single day.”

Interviewer(s)	Anaiah Quinn
Date	9/7/26	Time	11:07 AM
Location	In Person
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Better Parking

1. Explain your typical experience finding parking

“Daily parking for me is not too stressful. I don't look for spots super close to my destination. I already have a general area that I park on my daily route.”

2. In what scenarios do you find parking to be the most troublesome?

“Parking is most troublesome around concerts or large community events.”

3. How close to your desired destination do you tend to find parking?

“Not very close because I spent a lot of time driving so I enjoy a walk to stretch out my legs unless I'm in a hurry.”

4. What makes a good parking spot?

“Close to my destination and wide enough for high SUV.”

5. What destinations tend to be harder to find parking for?

“The university / schools and hospitals.”

6. What would make finding parking easier for you?

“Maybe an app that identifies open parking spots. I saw that there is one in Chicago that provides this info”

7. How does pay to park affect your parking experience?

“None”

Interviewer(s)	Anaiah Quinn
Date	9/7/26	Time	6:02 PM
Location	Online
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Better Parking

1. Explain your typical experience finding parking

“Depends on the time of day, but honestly parking isn’t that bad if you know what you're doing”

2. In what scenarios do you find parking to be the most troublesome?

“During times where there are huge events like concerts or graduations.”

3. How close to your desired destination do you tend to find parking?

“I find parking fairly close to my destination.”

4. What makes a good parking spot?

“A good parking spot had plenty of shade, easily accessible from a main street, and Is not that far from my destination (within 5 minutes walking distance).”

5. What destinations tend to be harder to find parking for?

“College campuses and doctor offices or dentist office”

6. What would make finding parking easier for you?

“An app that shows the current business of the parking lot or surrounding area. That updates when there is no parking or spots are taken.”

7. How does pay to park affect your parking experience?

“I don't mind spending money on parking if it's way closer and easier for me, tis capitalism but it's all about convenience.”

 - Not many, more of a shut-in type of person

Interviewer(s)	Armando Cabrera
Date	9/7/26	Time	02:24 PM
Location	Neighborhood
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Party Planner

1. Tell me about the last time you had to plan something, like a party or event. Follow up: Walk me through your process.

The participant is currently planning a future birthday party for their niece. Their process begins by selecting a date and time, then finding a location that is available and reasonably priced for the budget. After the date, time, and location are established, they brainstorm a theme, research decoration prices, create invitations, research vendors for tables and chairs, consider entertainment, and plan food through catering or cooking.

2. Walk me through how you keep track of elements when planning?

They write down the options they are considering, including vendors, food, and locations, even when some vendors have not responded yet. Once a final option is selected, they mark it differently so it is visually clear that the decision is confirmed.

3. Tell me about the best party that you have been to; could you have made it better? (Vice versa)

The participant could not think of a specific best or worst party example during the interview.

4. What do you consider when planning an event?

They consider many of the same factors they identified as difficult parts of planning, especially time, attendance, food, and location.

5. What do you consider the hardest part of planning social gatherings/events/parties?

They identified time, attendance, food, and location as the hardest parts. Time is affected by weather and whether people can attend. Food can be difficult if it is not prepared, delivered, or brought on time, so a backup such as catering may be needed. Location matters because the organizer wants to avoid excessive travel for guests or make the event worth the trip if travel is required.

Interviewer(s)	Armando Cabrera
Date	9/7/26	Time	12:24 PM
Location	Online
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Party Planner

1. Tell me about the last time you had to plan something, like a party or event. Follow up: Walk me through your process.

The participant recently planned a birthday party for a friend. Their goal was to establish the time, food, and activities early enough that the details would not become a larger last-minute problem. Looking back, they felt that assigning specific roles to other people could have made the planning process easier.

2. Walk me through how you keep track of elements when planning?

They primarily use a written list and rely on communication with assistants or other people helping with the event.

3. Tell me about the best party that you have been to; could you have made it better? (Vice versa)

For a negative example, the participant described attending a friend's birthday party where the main activity was watching a movie. There was little conversation or engagement. They would have added board games, activities, or other opportunities for interaction. Their preferred parties keep guests engaged and encourage participation.

4. What do you consider when planning an event?

They consider the location, who is attending or the expected head count, a date that works for everyone, the food or menu, and activities that are appropriate for the people attending. Food decisions can also depend on the location and time.

5. What do you consider the hardest part of planning social gatherings/events/parties?

The hardest part is getting everyone's input and receiving useful feedback about ideas or suggestions. Attendance is especially difficult because the organizer needs responses from other people before confidently making other decisions.

Interviewer(s)	Armando Cabrera
Date	9/7/26	Time	05:12 PM
Location	Online
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Party Planner

1. Tell me about the last time you had to plan something, like a party or event. Follow up: Walk me through your process.

The participant recently planned a gathering with friends to celebrate a friend's birthday. Their goal was to spend as little as possible, so attendees were assigned specific things to bring or manage instead of one person purchasing everything. The process began by selecting a date and time, discussing food options, and assigning responsibilities for food, activities, music, and other needs.

2. Walk me through how you keep track of elements when planning?

They use a written list to keep track of the different parts of the gathering and also rely on people remembering and completing their assigned responsibilities.

3. Tell me about the best party that you have been to; could you have made it better? (Vice versa)

The participant used the recent gathering as an example. One person was assigned to bring dessert but arrived extremely late, so dessert was not available when expected. They would have preferred a Plan B or alternative so one delayed item would not affect the event plan.

4. What do you consider when planning an event?

The participant primarily considers the comfort of the guests. They want people attending to feel comfortable, relaxed, and able to enjoy the gathering.

5. What do you consider the hardest part of planning social gatherings/events/parties?

Finding a location and choosing a date are the hardest parts. Guests have different schedules, which makes it difficult to find a time and place that work for everyone. Until those details are settled, the remaining planning becomes more difficult.

Interviewer(s)	Armando Cabrera
Date	9/7/26	Time	06:40 PM
Location	Online
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Party Planner

1. Tell me about the last time you had to plan something, like a party or event. Follow up: Walk me through your process.

The participant recently helped plan a baby shower. The process required feedback from several people. They began by creating or matching a theme and then considered ideas and activities. The location had already been established, so choosing a venue was not part of this particular planning process.

2. Walk me through how you keep track of elements when planning?

They write ideas and plans on a list and keep track of what needs to be done and who is responsible. They also discuss decisions with others so everyone agrees and has the same understanding of the plan.

3. Tell me about the best party that you have been to; could you have made it better? (Vice versa)

For a negative experience, the participant described being invited to a party before the organizer had established a date or time. They were told details would come later, but the next update came on the day of the event, when the organizer called and said the party had started about ten minutes earlier. The participant would have wanted a confirmed date and time before the invitation and better communication and updates.

4. What do you consider when planning an event?

They first consider food and location. Finding a venue or place has historically been an annoyance for them.

5. What do you consider the hardest part of planning social gatherings/events/parties?

Getting an accurate head count is the hardest part because attendance affects other decisions and helps avoid wasting time and money. Their second major difficulty is deciding on food or a menu for guests.

Interviewer(s)	Armando Cabrera
Date	9/7/26	Time	09:10 PM
Location	Online
Phase (1 or 2)	1	Idea or problem area	Party Planner

1. Tell me about the last time you had to plan something, like a party or event. Follow up: Walk me through your process.

The participant regularly helps plan holiday gatherings such as Christmas and New Year's parties. They make a checklist for food, invited guests, and activities. Their process begins by taking a head count, then considering food, activities, and location. For food, they consider which people know how to prepare certain dishes and divide dish responsibilities to provide variety.

2. Walk me through how you keep track of elements when planning?

They write down a list and maintain open communication with people who are helping or participating so responsibilities can be tracked and everyone has a common understanding of the plan.

3. Tell me about the best party that you have been to; could you have made it better? (Vice versa)

New Year's parties are among the participant's favorite gatherings because they allow family members to spend time together. They enjoy activities and music because these create engagement and a positive atmosphere. One improvement would be better time management, such as set times for activities and clearer expectations for when assigned dishes should arrive.

4. What do you consider when planning an event?

They consider whether people will feel comfortable and whether the event provides opportunities for engagement. They prefer an environment where people stay together and participate rather than separating into areas where guests disengage from the group.

5. What do you consider the hardest part of planning social gatherings/events/parties?

Keeping track of or securing an accurate head count is the hardest part. Selecting a date and time that allows more people to attend is another significant challenge.

Interviewer(s)	Gabe
-----------------------	------	--

Date	9/5/2026	Time	14:45pm
Location	Cielo Vista Mall
Phase (1 or 2)	Phase 1	Idea or problem area	Book Summarizer

Question 1: When was the last time you fully completed any book?

-The last book I fully completed was Killing Sacred Cows 2.0 by Garrett Gunderson.

Question 2: Are you a fast reader or slow reader?

-I would consider myself a fairly fast reader.

Question 3: Do you prefer to read or listen to a book? Or both?

-I prefer reading. I feel like I can process written information faster than when someone is reading it aloud, so audiobooks tend to feel slower to me.

Question 4: How do you search for books you're trying to read?

-I usually find books through recommendations rather than actively searching for them. When I do look for books, I'm mostly interested in finance, personal development, psychology, and self-improvement.

Question 5: What usually stops you from finishing a book once you start it?

-Usually repetition. Sometimes a book starts repeating the same ideas in different ways, and once I feel like I've understood the main point, I lose interest in continuing.

Question 6: Have you ever looked up a summary of a book instead of reading the entire book? Why?

-Yes, many times. I'll usually look up a summary if a book is particularly long because I don't always want to commit the time to reading 400+ pages. I generally prefer books around 200–300 pages.

Question 7: Would you use an app that summarizes books and gives you the most important ideas and key points? Why or why not?

-Probably not. With AI being readily available, I can already ask it to summarize a book and explain its most important ideas and key points without needing a separate app specifically for that purpose.

Question 8: How long would you want a book summary to take to read or listen to: 5, 10, 15, or 30 minutes?

-Five minutes. If I'm choosing a summary instead of reading the entire book, I would want it to be extremely quick and focused on the most important information.

Interviewer(s)	Gabe

Phase (1 or 2)	Phase 1	Idea or problem area	Book Summarizer

Question 1: When was the last time you fully completed any book?

-Last month

Question 2: Are you a fast reader or slow reader?

-It honestly depends on the book. If it's an easier read, I can usually get through it pretty quickly. But there have been some books where I've had to slow down to fully understand them. It really depends on the difficulty of the book.

Question 3: Do you prefer to read or listen to a book? Or both?

-I prefer reading a physical book. Something about having the actual book in my hands that makes me more excited to read it and when you're done, you can use them as decoration.

Question 4: How do you search for books you're trying to read?

-Some of my favorite books have been recommended by friends. I've also found books through Reddit, and if I really like an author, I'll look into more of their work. That usually leads me to similar books and authors too.

Question 5: What usually stops you from finishing a book once you start it?

-Usually it's when I notice that I'm trying to get through the book quickly instead of actually reading it to enjoy it. That's normally a sign that I've lost my attention span for the time being, so I'll stop reading for the day and come back to it later

Question 6: Have you ever looked up a summary of a book instead of reading the entire book? Why?

-No, to read a book. but I actually like looking up a summary after I finish one, though. It helps me see if I understood everything correctly or if there were certain details or meanings I might have overlooked.

Question 7: Would you use an app that summarizes books and gives you the most important ideas and key points? Why or why not?

-I would use one, but I don't think I'd rely on it entirely. A summary can give you the main ideas, but I feel like it could leave out smaller details that might actually be important to the story or your understanding of the book.

Question 8: How long would you want a book summary to take to read or listen to: 5, 10, 15, or 30 minutes?

-I think 5-10 minutes would be enough for a basic summary. If I wanted something more in depth that covered more details, then I'd probably prefer 15-30 minutes.

Question 1: When was the last time you fully completed any book?

-The last time I fully completed a book was today.

Question 2: Are you a fast reader or slow reader?

-I would consider myself a fast reader, especially when the book is interesting and keeps my attention.

Question 3: Do you prefer to read or listen to a book? Or both?

-I enjoy both reading and listening to books. It usually depends on what I am doing and which option is more convenient at the time.

Question 4: How do you search for books you're trying to read?

-I usually visit Barnes & Noble and look through the books individually. I like reading the descriptions and browsing different sections until something catches my attention.

Question 5: What usually stops you from finishing a book once you start it?

-I usually stop reading when the writing feels dull, the plot takes too long to progress, or the characters are not interesting enough to keep me engaged.

Question 6: Have you ever looked up a summary of a book instead of reading the entire book? Why?

-Yes, I did this in high school when I was assigned a book that did not interest me. I was too unmotivated to read the entire book, so I used a summary to understand the main ideas and complete the assignment.

Question 7: Would you use an app that summarizes books and gives you the most important ideas and key points? Why or why not?

-Yes, I would use an app like this. If I ever needed to read a book but was not interested in it, having all the important information in one place would be very helpful. It would also save me from searching through multiple websites to find reliable summaries and key points.

Question 8: How long would you want a book summary to take to read or listen to: 5, 10, 15, or 30 minutes?

-A 5 minute summary would be great if it could explain the most important parts clearly. However, I think a summary should ideally take around 10–15 minutes, or possibly longer, to give someone enough time to understand the story's basic concepts, characters, and main ideas.

Question 1: When was the last time you fully completed any book?

-Last book i read in full was the 4 agreements of a dysfunctional team.

Question 2: Are you a fast reader or slow reader?

-I am a very slow reader, this probably is a result from how little I actually read in addition to being bilingual and not consistent in my media consumption.

Question 3: Do you prefer to read or listen to a book? Or both?

-Listen to books, it helps me keep focused and not lose track as much as I usually do when trying to read a book. Plus more flexibility in how I consume it, I can work out, walk, or do house chores while listening to it.

Question 4: How do you search for books you're trying to read?

-Since I am not much of a reader, I rely a lot on what the people around me are reading, therefore look for referrals and recommendations from the people around me. I typically trust people who share similar interests, who can reference books into our conversations, therefore I know those books will actually peak my interest and offer value to me.

Question 5: What usually stops you from finishing a book once you start it?

-I have a lot of trouble staying focused on one thing for a long period of time if there isn't extra stimuli that keeps me focused. So I can play video games for hours, which seems contradicting vs reading a book, but a book itself, doesn't require me to solve puzzles while exploring a map and such.

Question 6: Have you ever looked up a summary of a book instead of reading the entire book? Why?

-I have, I usually use chat gpt to give me a summary of books, manga, or anime. This way I can also ask follow up questions without it being just a summary where I may or may not miss context.

Question 7: Would you use an app that summarizes books and gives you the most important ideas and key points? Why or why not?

-I would, considering I already use chat gpt to help me analyze and dissect media I consume, doing it to summarize more books and gather more knowledge would be a no brainer.

Question 8: How long would you want a book summary to take to read or listen to: 5, 10, 15, or 30 minutes?

-Between 5-20 minutes I would say. Why such a big range, depending on the book, 20 minutes feels like a solid podcast time format which would keep my focus and give me a very solid detailed interpretation for the book, but there are also shorter books or summaries that I really just want the answer and don't have the patience to read the book so a quick 5 minute summary would help me get exactly what i need.

Question 1: When was the last time you fully completed any book?

-The last time I fully completed a book was in July.

Question 2: Are you a fast reader or slow reader?

-I am a fast reader when the book is interesting and keeps my attention. If I am not interested in the story or topic, I tend to read much more slowly.

Question 3: Do you prefer to read or listen to a book? Or both?

-I prefer reading a physical book because I enjoy holding the book and turning the pages. It also helps me stay focused and engaged with what I am reading.

Question 4: How do you search for books you're trying to read?

-I usually get recommendations from family and friends. I also use Claude or ChatGPT to suggest what I should read next. Another source I use is The Skimm newsletter because it interviews authors and recommends new books.

Question 5: What usually stops you from finishing a book once you start it?

-A lack of interest can make it difficult for me to finish a book. However, even when a book does not keep my attention, I still try my best to complete it.

Question 6: Have you ever looked up a summary of a book instead of reading the entire book? Why?

-Yes, I have looked up book summaries before. I usually do this to find out whether I would enjoy the book or if its information would be useful or beneficial to me before spending time reading the entire thing.

Question 7: Would you use an app that summarizes books and gives you the most important ideas and key points? Why or why not?

-Yes, but I would mainly use it for books that I am required to read for work. When I choose a book for entertainment, I would rather read the entire book and experience the complete story.

Question 8: How long would you want a book summary to take to read or listen to: 5, 10, 15, or 30 minutes?

-I would prefer a book summary to take about 5-10 minutes. That would be enough time to understand the main ideas and key points without making the summary feel too long.
